Three Easy Ways to Stay Close to Christ

God is a companion who will never fail us. If we walk through life with him, victory over evil and unhappiness is assured. The most practical application of this fundamental Christian truth has to do with how Christians react to tragedy and suffering. We know that God can bring good even out of the greatest evils, just as he brought salvation and the Resurrection out of the horrible failure of the Crucifixion. As a result, we have strength to weather any storm that comes our way. We don't have to understand why God permits certain hardships and sufferings, because we already know that in the end he will never let us down. The Christian can pray, persevere, and find hope even amidst tears and terrible darkness, because we know that Christ's victory will be ours, if we stay by his side. And staying by his side is not complicated. It means three things. It means an ongoing effort to grow in our prayer and sacramental life. It means an ongoing effort to understand and follow Church teaching, both about faith and about moral issues. And it means an ongoing effort to be like Christ in our own lives - in the excellence of our work, the dependability of our character, and the self-sacrificing faithfulness of our relationships. To pray is to follow Church teaching, and to imitate Christ in our daily lives. This is how we stay close to Christ, our faithful companion, who is leading us to a share in his eternal victory. In this Mass, when we receive Jesus in Holy Communion, let's thank our Lord for the great gift of his friendship, and let's promise that we will never again try to walk through life alone.
