To My Father

When I made my first appearance in this wonderful world of ours, I was a tiny, wrinkled being, as fragile as a shadow. I relied on your strength, Dad, you were so strong. When I was a toddler, I thought you were as tall as the tallest tree. You could brave the strongest wind, you took care of my tears and my fears. I loved your strength Dad. You gave me the love and encouragement that I needed as I grew up, you spent time with me. I still treasure these memories, I received so much from you. I must confess that during my teenage years, I would laugh at your old fashioned ways. I didn't realize how wise you were, but, you forgave me. You were there for me while I braved the storms. You made me realize that I could take chances. You watched my dreams become reality. I admire your wisdom even more. I see you growing older and weaker. When I see you suffer behind your rough exterior. I cry a little, Dad. It's my turn to be the tall tree that protects and shelters. Night is fast approaching, sit down and rest under my branches. I will always be there for you.
